Dear Colleagues,

European Neurological Review invites colleagues in the neurology community to contribute articles for the 2018 summer and winter editions. European Neurological Review aims to provide practicing physicians and related healthcare professionals in the field of neurology with concise and timely articles that provide practical advice and help them in their day-to-day clinical setting.

Authors are invited to submit review articles, editorials, special reports, case reports and original research across all areas of neurology for consideration. The journal is particularly interested in the submission of real-world studies and topical review articles that provide a concise overview of the latest clinical trial data and developments in the field for busy physicians. Authors can submit their manuscript directly through the Editorial Manager site (details below) and presubmission enquiries can be made to the journal's editor (christina.mackins@touchmedicalmedia.com). Accepted articles are published open access, both in print and online, and authors are actively encouraged to submit accompanying multimedia content alongside their article.

We look forward to working with you.

Cris S Constantinescu and the European Neurological Review team
